Saikrishna Prakash is James Monroe Distinguished Professor of Law and Horace W. Goldsmith Research Professor at the University of Virginia. Previously, he was Herzog Research Professor of Law at the University of San Diego School of Law and an associate professor at Boston University School of Law. He has been a visiting professor at the Northwestern University School of Law, the University of Chicago Law School, and University of Illinois College of Law. Professor Prakash was also a James Madison Program Visiting Fellow at Princeton University and Visiting Research Fellow at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University. Before entering academia, he clerked for Judge Laurence H. Silberman of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit and for Justice Clarence Thomas of the U.S. Supreme Court. Among his articles are “50 States, 50 Attorneys General and 50 Approaches to the Duty to Defend,” published in the Yale Law Journal; “The Imbecilic Executive,” published in the Virginia Law Review; and “The Sweeping Domestic War Powers of Congress,” published in the Michigan Law Review. His new book, Imperial from the Beginning: The Constitution of the Original Executive, was just published this year by Yale University Press. He received his BA in economics and political science at Stanford University and his JD from Yale Law School. At Yale, he served as senior editor of the Yale Law Journal and received the John M. Olin Fellowship in Law, Economics and Public Policy.
